NOVEMBER 2002

The U.S.-Canada Partnership for Growth was officially launched on November 7, 2002 in Washington, DC and Toronto. The launch was timed to coincide with an initial burst of advertising that began running on November 5, 2002.

To launch the campaign, press events were held in Washington, DC and Toronto featuring the Partnership's co-chairs, William E. Brock, former Republican senator from Tennessee and former United States Trade Representative, and James J. Blanchard, former Democratic governor of Michigan and former U.S. Ambassador to Canada.

As part of the launch, advertisements hit the press and blanketed the airwaves in the following target markets:

Arizona
Colorado

Nevada
New Mexico

A coordinated grassroots outreach and engagement campaign in the target states/districts coincided with the advertising. Through strategic grassroots efforts, constituents in the target districts were encouraged to educate themselves on the facts, form an opinion based on the arguments, and voice their concerns to their respective Members of Congress by letter, fax, and/or scheduled meeting.

Additional attention was generated through the media. A number of local and national media outlets, including wire services, covered the launch of the U.S. – Canada Partnership for Growth. The core messages – the value of trade between the nations, the importance of the overall relationship, the need to work out the tariff dispute, the impact of this tax on consumers – was reflected in the coverage.

DECEMBER 2002 – MARCH 2003

After the launch of the U.S.-Canada Partnership for Growth campaign, there was an emphasis on grassroots mobilization and earned media in coordination with government relations activities.

The campaign launched a grassroots outreach and engagement campaign in target states and districts timed to coincide with the first wave of advertising. Through these coordinated and strategic grassroots efforts, constituents in the target districts and states were encouraged to educate themselves about the lumber tariff, form an opinion and voice their concerns to their respective Members of Congress by letter, fax and/or scheduled meeting. In an additional attempt to generate letters to Congress, the campaign exhibited at the International Builders Show in Las Vegas. Beyond generating letters, the exhibit was also important in increasing awareness of the lumber tariff issue within the homebuilding industry and in recruiting members to the Partnership.

Additional attention to the tariff issue was also generated through the media. The campaign was able to proactively leverage significant announcements and events by developing and distributing press releases, media statements and an op-ed piece surrounding the 10th anniversary of the North American Free Trade Agreement and the World Trade Organization's ruling on the "Byrd Amendment." The campaign also announced to the media a National Advisory Board of thirty members from various target states, a new partner organization (the American Homeowners Grassroots Alliance) and its participation at the International Builders Show.

The second phase of advertising began on February 5 and ran through early March in Washington, DC and target markets across the country. The advertising campaign included a television spot, two print advertisements, two print advertorials and an Internet banner ad.

On a parallel track, grassroots outreach and engagement activity continued in target states and districts. Through these coordinated and strategic grassroots efforts, constituents in the target districts and states were encouraged to educate themselves about the lumber tariff, form an opinion and voice their concerns to their respective Members of Congress by letter, fax and/or scheduled meeting.

Additional attention to the tariff issue was also generated through the media, particularly surrounding the lumber trade deliberations. The campaign was able to proactively build upon significant announcements and events including the membership announcement of the U.S. Hispanic Contractors Association and a media day in New York City on February 21 with co-chairs Blanchard and Brock. Media opportunities included a media roundtable and luncheon with Forbes and interviews with Bloomberg and Fortune.
